“ DON STURM...my uncle & Godfather!It is w/great honor to know such a strong, hard working, family man who reminds me so much of Grandpa. I wish w/all my heart that there were something someone could do to take away the pain but there isn't. When my brother passed away, I found that people do & say the most incredibly stupid things in their effort to comfort. Forgive them for sympathy & empathy arn't founded on constructive, intellectual thought processes but rather on emotions. People were saying we should do this or don't do that as an aid in recovering from our grief. I was confused because all I knew was that there was this incredible pain that seemed only to get worse. Then a very understanding woman said what works for others won't work for you. Each loved one who leaves has had their own special relationship w/those left behind that's not duplicated in any other family. We must each find for ourselves what it takes to replace the pain w/memories & mend the peices of our broken hearts. I found (w/out thinking about it) that it doesn't hurt as much as today. And on some other day it didn't hurt as much as it did that day. You'll never stop missing him but you'll discover he's still with you, truly! My deepest sympathy to all family & friends going through the heartache of our loss. Please take care spiritually, emotionally & physically!
