Elaine was a special needs child and learning did not come as easily to her as it did to her classmates at St. Augustine's School, Halbur. Today we would call her early education "home schooled". However, Elaine was blessed as a young woman when New Hope Village was established and she could take the bus to school every day where she learned new skills and expanded her social world.

Over time, New Hope became Elaine's permanent home where she was able to live in a group setting, learn life skills, and enjoy many friendships. She was also able to develop work skills and held jobs in such things as office cleaning and sorting recycling. She showed an artistic side in painting holiday ceramics and other works of self-expression.

Elaine enjoyed life. She loved wearing costume jewelry, lunching with a friend and taking mini vacations to various locations around the Midwest. Elaine was a Christian and appreciated the opportunity to attend Mass with friends and family.

Elaine did not take up much space in this world, but she brought a big smile and lots of love to the place she occupied. She was quiet and more content to listen than lead the conversation. But she could ascertain and point out some basic truths that those around may have overlooked. And she did it with the assurance that any thinking person would agree with her.

Elaine is survived by her brothers Norman, Olatha, Kansas, and Allen (Barb), Omaha, Nebraska, and sisters, Lenore Lodge of Sioux City, Carol Riesenber, Moscow, Idaho, and Mary Johnson, Tucson, Arizona. She is also survived by brother-in-law Ron Ensley, Great Bend, Kansas, and many cousins, nieces and nephews. Elaine was preceded in death by her parents and by her brother John and sister Diane.

Elaine and her family appreciated the kind and thoughtful care she received from New Hope Village, Accura HealthCare, and Kindred Hospice staff.

“ I was blessed to work at New Hope Village many years ago. I worked in cottage 2 and that is where I met Elaine. Elaine was truly a happy person. She shared her wonderful smile with all she met.

“ I worked at the home she was at when she was at New Hope. She was always a very interesting person to talk with and she would let you know when she needed help with certain things she needed. But she liked her independence also to do what she wanted and to get her own things when she was able to get them.
