“ In life, if you are lucky, you are blessed with a mentor or two who you aspire to emulate. I was fortunate to have a couple and George was certainly one of them. George took the time to get to know me. George took the time to teach me. Georgia took the time to show me how to drive a truck and ultimately took the time to help me get my CDL license. I haven't driven a semi for thirty years now but I still have my CDL as it's a constant reminder of the friendship I had with a great man. I will never forget the time one night I beat George at a game of pool at a truck stop near Chicago. If George won, I was out a hundred dollars. If I won, I got to drive "Sally" in Chicago the next morning. Needless to say, I won that game after George had cleaned my clock at the table all night long. That next day was a life experience I'll never forget and spending time in that old Kenworth with George was some of the best philosophical discussions a man could ever ask for. George, thank you for your friendship, thank you for the education, thank you for the motivation to get my name in a platt book and most of all, thank you for letting me get to know your family. I now consider your son Stan to be one of my dearest friends. I will certainly miss you. Mike Wanninger
